Knowledge Check: Training Compliance

Are your Lifeloc certifications current and compliant?

The importance of keeping your BAT certificate current is common knowledge, but did you know it is equally as important to maintain your calibration and instructor certifications?

A CLOCT (Certified Lifeloc Operator & Calibration Technician certification) not only ensures you are well educated on the operation and maintenance of the EBT but it also allows you to conduct full Calibration on the EBT once per year in accordance with the Quality Assurance Plan, and any other time it may be necessary. This is a secondary certificate which goes in conjunction with your BAT certificate. Your BAT certificate alone does not allow you to conduct a compliant calibration on the EBT, only a calibration check.

Not CLOCT certified? Even if you were not CLOCT certified at the time of your BAT certification, you can add it on at any time.

What's the importance of using a certified instructor?

Why should you use a certified instructor and not just follow the bare minimum guidelines which allows a BAT to be certified by another qualified BAT? First lets talk about what a certified instructor is. A Lifeloc Provisional Instructor or Master Trainer has been through extensive training which prepares them to train BATs and CLOCTs in accordance with DOT regulations. They have been provided specific training materials to use for both the rules and regulations portion and for the hands on portion which includes equipment proficiency, mock testing and calibration. Additionally, they are authorized to train on Lifeloc equipment by the manufacturer. Depending on the level of certification, these trainers have to renew their Lifeloc certification every 1 to 2 years while also maintaining their BAT and CLOCT certifications.

Simply put, it is in your benefit to work with a certified instructor because their knowledge, experience and access to training materials ensure that they thoroughly cover all required parts of the certification and can answer any questions that you as a BAT may have.

Could your facility benefit from having an instructor on staff? Provisional Instructor certification allows one employee of the organization to train all other employees as BATs and CLOCT on the Lifeloc EBT, which can provide a huge time and cost savings.

Need a local Master Trainer? Lifeloc has a network of experienced substance abuse training professionals, conveniently located throughout the US and Canada.
